The Newport Daily News (Rep.) wants President Hayes renominated.

Miss Anna E. Dickinson's play of "Aurelia" has been taken to Europe, there to be put upon the stage.

It is said that many men among the Mormons of Utah desire polygamy abolished. No doubt more women of the territory desire it.

The reason why we object to woman suffrage is because they would vote indiscriminately. They would join neither party, all they would want is plenty of candidacies. N. Y. Telegram.

The public lands sold last year only netted the Government an average of nine and three-quarters cents per acre. But we are consoled by thinking that Uncle Sam sold the land mainly to his own children.

The reception and breakfast given by the publishers of the Atlantic Monthly in honor of the 70th birthday of Oliver Wendell Holmes will take place at the Hotel Brunswick, New York, on Wednesday, December 3d.

An exchange commenting upon the remark of the New York Herald that the national bird on the Island dollar is a turkey, thinks it is bad taste to so insult the turkey during Thanksgiving week.

The demoralizing effects of lotteries was never more plainly illustrated than in the case of one O'Brien of New York, who drew $5,000 in a lottery, and in six months spent $40,000 in his own personal enjoyment. O'Brien refused to support his family, and is now pondering over his conduct on Blackwell's Island.

Shakhin, the Russian Minister to Washington, has done better than Czaritzin did. He has made known a remedy for diphtheria, which has been attended in Russia with great success. This is the benzoin of soda, and the Boston Post thinks that if it has stood the test in the hovels of Russia it ought to stand anywhere.

The most noticeable event in recent politics has occurred in Virginia, where, by the refusal of his Democratic competitor to take advantage of misprint ballots, Jonathan E. Housh, Republican, has been awarded his certificate of election as state senator from Norfolk county, Va. It seems there is at least one honest Democrat in the country.

It is only twenty years since John Brown was hanged and Governor Wise of Virginia was expressing a readiness to put a rope around the neck of every man who even hoped that the negroes might one day be free, but the other day one of his sons, in terms of eulogy, moved the admission of a black man to practice in the highest court of the State.

The prejudices of a former generation still sprout up occasionally. The latest instance is at one of the New York theatres, where a colored man was denied admission. The result is a suit for damages under the civil rights bill. The plaintiff is a full-blooded African of fine education and well-known business standing, and the defendants the managers of the Grand Opera House. Although "Blue Jeans" Williams, Governor of Indiana, is a Democrat and refused to attend the reception of Gen. Grant in Chicago, he is not altogether devoid of good ideas. He has now, it is reported, organized the "ticket-of-leave" system in Indiana. When he pardons a man out of the penitentiary it is conditional on his abstaining from intoxicating drinks for the remainder of the term for which he was committed. A violation of this subjects him to re-arrest and imprisonment.

Colwell, the ex-train despatcher, through whose mismanagement the awful accident occurred on the Michigan Southern Railroad, at Jackson, Mich., recently, told a reporter that since the terrible disaster he was unable to obtain any refreshing sleep. He said the instant he lost consciousness he could hear the noise of railroad trains; then they would burst upon his sight as they sped madly toward each other; the signal of whistles for switch and brake would next start him, and instantly, with a terrible crash, the locomotives would strike, when he would waken in a tremor of fright. Colwell is punished more severely than he would be if sent to the penitentiary.

Appropos of Mr. Froude's article in the current number of the North American Review, upon Romanism in the United States, comes an announcement concerning the policy of the Roman Catholic Church in New England toward the public schools. The Archbishop, following the advice of the Pope to a European bishop, has ordered all the priests in the Archdiocese of New England to establish parochial schools at once. He threatens parents who refuse to patronize the new schools with the terrors of the Church. In localities where the influence of the public schools is thought to be particularly injurious to Catholic youths the priests are instructed to withdraw the children at once, even if there be no parochial schools in the vicinity.

The Philadelphia Evening News evidently remembers General Butler's observation during the war, to find out what the rebels didn't like, and give them plenty of it, for it speaks thus about the policy the Republican party should adopt: "It is usually wise for parties, as well as individuals, to do exactly what their enemies most desire them not to do, and therefore, when the Democracy rise in righteous indignation at the suggestion of Grant's nomination, it would seem by this rule that Grant is the very man for the Republicans to nominate. It is not so much the danger of the third-term principle that disturbs the opponents of General Grant, as the overwhelming popular enthusiasm which greets the soldier-statesman at every turn, and which would indicate his election beyond peradventure were he nominated."

Mankind in general will hear, with alarm, that there is danger of a return of the hoop-skirt mania. If for no other reason, for the sake of their own appearance, it is to be hoped that the women will frown down resumption in the hoop-skirt line.

Joshua Burton's cart, driven by W. Scott, capsized on Tuesday afternoon while trying to keep up with the horse, which became frightened and ran away, starting from Mill street, up Cedar and down Walnut, until Washington Hall was reached, when both cart and horse turned over. The horse was not injured, and was soon released from his unpleasant position.

The case of Thomas Graham, the accomplice of Hunter in the murder of John M. Armstrong, was removed some time ago from the jurisdiction of the Camden Court to the Supreme Court of the State. At Trenton on Monday the Supreme Court, which has been in session for a fortnight, sentenced Graham to imprisonment for twenty years.

Last Saturday night near the canal bridge Evans States was set upon by three young men, and terribly beaten about the face and head. On Tuesday afternoon Charles Nelly and Caldwell Archer of Bristol, and Frank Cummings of Newportville, were arrested for committing the assault. They were given a hearing before Judge Bailey, who, in default of bail, then committed to the lock-up until Wednesday morning, when they were taken by Constable Saxton to Doylestown to spend their Thanksgiving.

A dispatch to the Evening Bulletin, dated Millford Pike county, Pa., Nov. 24, says: "Walter Mitchell, a land swindler, disappeared suddenly a day or two ago. Detectives, with a requisition for his arrest from Governor Hoyt, came here, and Mitchell was warned and disappeared. One detective is here working up the case. Mitchell is hiding in or near Millford, awaiting suitable opportunity to escape to Maryland. He is wanted for swindling Harry Cox of New York, out of four thousand dollars on wild land in Pike county. Mitchell is worth two hundred thousand dollars, and owns fourteen thousand acres of land in Maryland. He assigned all his property in Millford this morning to Peter Kopp for three thousand dollars."

A wild man and his son have been discovered by a party of enterprising journalists living in the woods of Wyoming county, Pa., twenty miles from Scranton. The man was clothed and was intelligent, being able to read and write. The son was naked and appeared to be an idiot. He was as wild as an animal and much more dirty. They have no desire, apparently, to live in a more civilized way. They burn logs to keep themselves warm, and the son picks up hot ashes and rubs himself with them. Some time since the son stabbed his sister, who was as wild as himself, with a piece of scythe, and she subsequently died from the effects of the wound. The man is apparently some sixty years of age, and the son thirty.

The Bucks County Almshouse.
EDITOR GAZETTE.—In my last I endeavored to show you things as they appeared to me at the hospital. I will now try and do the same with regard to the poorhouse. Having bid good bye to the Steward of the hospital, a few steps brought me to the portal of the "bourse," into which no man likes to enter, and also, face to face with that important personage, Steward Fetter, who immediately asked me my business, and being informed that I desired to see the poorhouse, just as quickly told me that I couldn't. I reminded him that it was visitor's day; that I had walked all the way from Doylestown to see it, &c., but still he didn't seem inclined to relent very much; he only asked me if it was Thursday, a fact which he seemed to have forgotten. It is strange how defective a person's memory sometimes may become, under certain circumstances. However, I am not very easily bluffed, and he was not the only one who was deceived when they tried to play the game of bluff on me. So I told him as politely as I could that I came to see a friend in the hospital; that Mr. Cornell had received as one gentleman should receive another; that I also came in the capacity of a reporter; that if he gave me an opportunity I should endeavor to report nothing but facts, but that if refused permission to go through the building, I would not forget to report that fact. Upon hearing which, he informed me that he was at my service. One of the first places he took me through was the nursery; here several cradles were in use, each one occupied by a tiny human being, looking just as comfortable and happy as if they had drawn their first breath under more favorable circumstances, and quite oblivious of the fact "That they were nobody's darlings." Poor babies, how soon "the sins of the fathers were visited upon them." But still, how comforting to know that the command of the Master, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not," extends even to them. The babes seemed to be under the special care of some old women, one of whom seemed to be tenderly waiting on one as I entered the room. There were also a number of little ones running about the room, quite as clean, healthy and happy as other children. As the Steward entered the room one fat little urchin, about two years old, came toddling toward him, its little hands extended, and its mouth raised for a kiss, in the same manner, poor mothers, as your little ones do to you on going to school every morning, and without which the day would seem very long, both to you and to them. The Steward stooped down, took the little thing in his arms, and with the arms flung about his neck, he carried her through some rooms, and then set her down, when she toddled back quite happy to her nursery. It seemed to be daily recurrence, and something the child expected. Show me a man who is fond of children, who can feel with them in their little sorrow, and share their joys, and I will show you a man who has a kind and generous heart beating under his vest. I care not how rough his face may be, Steward Fetter, the God of the orphan will reward you. At one end of the room was the mother of this child. She was a deaf mute and an idiot, and strange to say, the child seemed to have all its faculties, and to be quite as smart as other children of like age.

On leaving the nursery, I asked the Steward where the mothers of all these children were, he said they were in the house, and that they had to stay as long as the children stayed; that if they wanted to leave they would have to take the children. Now I will ask the taxpayers of the county, is this a wise policy to pursue? would it not pay better to keep the child, and let the mother earn her own living? Why should taxpayers maintain an idle woman, while she is able to earn her own living? I am well aware that there may be another side to this question, if so, I would be glad to have it. I simply start this discussion, hoping that the papers will take it up, and give it that attention which the importance of the question seems to me to demand.

Among the inmates that attracted my attention, was a very old man, who was confined in bed; he seemed to be suffering from old age, more than from sickness; as we entered his room he spoke to the Steward, and complained that he sent for Mrs. Fetter, and she never came near him; to this the Steward replied in the kindest manner that the messenger did not take her the message, which seemed to satisfy the old man. He now pleaded with the Steward for a lamp in his room; the Steward told him that he was afraid of fire, but the old man put in a plea of carelessness, which extorted from the Steward the much coveted prize, and the old man became very happy, probably until he sees the Steward again, when some thing else will be necessary to his happiness; but this propensity of longing for something new, is not peculiar to the old man, it is hereditary in his race, ever since Eve coveted the forbidden fruit in the Garden of Eden; and it is one of the legacies which old father Adam has bequeathed to his children.

For man feels a burden of care and of grief, while he is plotting the cluster and binding the wheat.

In the summer we faint, in the winter we're chilled, with ever a cold is yet to be filled, we take from the ocean, the earth, and the air, yet all their rich gifts do not satisfy our desire. N. E. D.

THE MAGAZINES.

Harper's Magazine, for December, is a very readable number. The illustrated articles are: "The Fortunes of the Bonapartes," "The New York Cooking School," "The Conmemora Hills," "The City of Atlanta," "The Palestine of To-day," "Sea-Drift from a New England Port," "Blossoms" (poem), and "London's Glory and Whittington's Renown" (collated). "The Fortunes of the Bonapartes" is a particularly interesting article, and just at the present time, when the death of the Prince Imperial is yet fresh in the public mind, will attract more than ordinary attention. Installments are given of the serials, "White Wings," "Young Mrs. Jardine," and "Mary Anceley." The remaining contents will amply repay perusal, while the departments are full of excellent reading matter.

Scrivener's Monthly, for December, will command attention from its pronounced merits. The illustrated articles are: "The Capitol of New York," "Brother Antonio" (poem), "Two Visits to Victor Hugo," "The John Hopkins University," "Coffee Culture in Brazil," and "Success with Small Fruits" (second paper). The latter, which treats of strawberries for home and market, will be read with special interest by farmers and gardeners. "Confidence" and "The Granddames" are continued and grow in interest, and the concluding paper on Bayard Taylor is given. There are a number of excellent "Poems by American Women," and the miscellaneous contents will be found entertaining. The departments are as interesting and valuable as ever.

Lippincott's Magazine, for December, has a varied and interesting table of contents. The illustrated articles are: "Among the Discipians," a graphic description of the old Spanish seaport of Bilbao; and "Summerland Sketches," chapter sixth, treating of "La Fiera Fina." Among the miscellaneous papers may be named: "The City of the Simple," dealing with the proper treatment of the insane; a criticism on "The Impressionist School of Painting," "English Clock Palaces," "Foreign Education for Young Republicans," "In the Backwoods of Carolina," and "Poisoning, and How to Treat it." All these papers deserve attentive reading. There are also several good entertaining short stories and some good poems. The departments are as attractive as usual. The present number contains Lippincott's twenty-fourth volume.

The Atlantic Monthly, for December, completing the forty-fourth volume, has variety of subjects and clever treatment of them. A poem, occupying over three pages, entitled "A Wall Between," and additionally labeled "A Dying Woman Speaks," may be properly regarded as a rhapsody and a soliloquy—sad, passionate and rather intelligible. Mr. George E. Waing, who has lately distinguished himself as a well-informed and observant writer, here gives a practical paper on "The National Board of Health, regarding it, so far, as a decided success of no little present utility and of great future promise." Another practical mind discusses on "Kansas Farmers and Illinois Daymen." There is a pleasant sketch by Richard Grant White, treating of "English manners." "Some of Us," a southwestern sketch, overflows with provincial dialect. W. A. Phillips gives an account of "Three Interviews with Old John Brown," and George Washington Greene, the well-known New England writer, has contributed "Reminiscences of George Grote," the latest and probably the best, historian of Greece. "Thirty-seven Hundred and Fifty-eight," begun here, occupies twenty-five pages, and to be completed in January and is a piece of guess-work—that is, an attempt to show children in 1879 the state of the world, moral and material, in the year 3758. We may here announce that The Atlantic Monthly for 1880 will open with "The Undiscovered Country," a serial story by W. D. Howells, which will run through six or more numbers. There will be a new poem by Dr. Holmes and a paper on the great farms of Minnesota and Dakota.

In former years it was a common occurrence to find 50 per cent. of the field hands in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama struck down with Swamp Fever, Chills and Fever, or Dumb Ague, just during the busiest time of summer. Now, we are glad to hear that the planters succeed in curing every case of the disease in a few days by the use of Dr. E. F. Fetter's Anti-Periodic and Fever and Ague Tonic, which is sold by all Druggists through the country.

The largest and best assortment of Wall Papers, New York and Philadelphia styles, in Bristol, also a choice selection of window shades, Window shades made and hung from 75 cents to $1.50. W. GRADY, Cedar street, between Walnut and Franklin streets, Bristol, Pa.

A Boston woman cut her dress from a pattern in a magazine dated 1873 before she discovered that it wasn't 1870, and it took three doctors to tide her over that long lonely night.

HUMBLED AGAIN.—I saw so much said about the merits of Hop Bitters, and my wife who was always doctoring, and never well, teased me so urgently to get her some, I concluded to be humbugged, again; and I am glad I did, for in less than two months she has remained so for eighteen months since. I like such humbugging.—H. T. St. Paul.

Generals Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Pope, Logan and Schofield formed a group at Haverly's Theatre in Chicago the other evening. The cheating knocked the plaster off the ceiling, and cracked the window panes.

My back aches so, and I feel miserably said a hard-working man. The doctor questioned him and found that he had been habitually constive for years, that now his kidneys were disordered and his whole system deranged. Kidney-Wort was recommended and faithfully taken and in a short time every trouble was removed. The cleansing and tonic power of this medicine on the bowels and kidneys is wonderful.

The widow of Charles Dickens died at her residence in London last week. She was married to Dickens in April, 1836, and was separated from him in 1868 for "incompatibility of temper," having had ten children. She had been ill for eighteen months.

Farmers get fooled when they buy Butter Powders and colored salts, and big bottles of cheap coloring stuff, if they expect to get as good a Butter Color as the Perfected Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington Vt.

The others have tried to imitate the excellence of this, the original color, but have wholly failed. Farmers should use only the "Perfected." Sold by Druggists and Merchants generally.
A ballot-box which rings when a vote enters the box, which counts all the ballots as they are received, stamps them with a number and files them neatly away beyond the reach of any hand, would seem to be as nearly perfect a device for preventing fraud at the polls as has been devised, and an ingenious New Yorker has invented such a contrivance.
